Teachers should utilize diverse approaches to teaching writing.

Teachers at all levels and across the disciplines should teach writing.

Teachers should show that changes in writing happen over time.

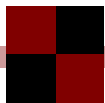

Teachers of writing must write.

Teachers should recognize that student writing can be improved by improving the teaching of writing.

Teachers are the best teachers to teach other teachers.

Summer Institute

The AAMU Writing Project, an affiliate of the National Writing Project, offers continuous programs to improve the professional development of teachers.

The Summer Institute is an intensive four-week program that brings together successful teachers to share methodologies of teaching writing.

The Summer Institute promotes professional growth, focuses on diversity, emphasizes writing, offers graduate credit, continuing education, and pays a stipend.

Contact us to find out how you can become an institute participant.

If you need information on any of the workshops, the summer institute or other opportunities Offered by the AAMU Writing Project, feel free to contact us for further details.
